What are your pronouns?

She/her for me, and she/her for my partner.

Describe your relationship as a couple.

Silly, spontaneous, and solid. What started as an obsessive, burn-the-candle-at-both-ends whirlwind summer romance has turned into something sweeter – blooming into a deeper magic as time wears on. I think we've met our match in each other – our relationship feels like a homecoming, of sorts. It's more than the addictive oxytocin chemistry, it's a profound feeling of being cared for, trusted, and supported. Our silly humor and mischievous streaks never fail to keep things interesting, but at the end of the day, we both know we have each other's backs.

Tell me about yourselves – what do you like to do together?

We love to dance, hike, and picnic.

Is there a photo on my Instagram or website that really grabbed your attention?

We love the one you've pinned to the top left of your grid! It captures everything we love about your style.

Have you experienced a professional photoshoot before? How did you find it?

Not really, no! We've been photographed at friends' weddings but we've never had one just for ourselves. But we liked the way the photographer directed all of us and kept everything lively and fun.

Tell me about your love story, what has shaped you into who you are as a couple today?

The first time I saw her was on the back of a motorcycle, dark hair trailing behind her like a sail. She was traveling the opposite way down a rocky path (you could barely call it a road) on the outskirts of Kathmandu. She had her arms wrapped tightly around a man who was driving too fast for the rubble and the mud. I saw her from my own motorbike, and although it hurt to look away, I almost ran my bike into a ditch and had to clumsily overcorrect. I know she saw me, too, because she responded with an expression that was equal parts amusement and concern. Her looks caught my eye, of course, she was undeniably stunning – but there was a certain something else about her, too. As desperately as I wanted to meet her, my pride couldn't bring me to turn the bike around and perform some grand gesture at the risk of being rejected or accused of being creepy. I told myself that if we were meant to meet, we would. And, as luck has it, we did. Two years later, we found ourselves deep in the wormhole that is online dating and came across each other's profiles. I recognised her immediately, and to my surprise, she remembered me, too. Unbeknownst to us, we had been living two blocks away from each other for the better part of a year. We met up at the local cafe, and the rest is history. We haven't left each other's side since. With such happenstance being our foundational story, our relationship feels free and trusting as a result. We both truly believe that what's meant for you won't pass you by.

How can we creatively tell your unique love story? How do you want to feel when you look back at these photos in 20 years?

We'd love to capture our love story as it is today. At home, with our dog, and all the reality of our life around us. When we look back at these photos in 20 years, we'd love to feel nostalgic for the life we led and for it to trigger memories of who we were and what our relationship was like back then.

Are you comfortable getting wet, sandy, or dirty during your photoshoot?

Yes!

How do you feel about more adventurous poses like piggy back rides?

We're down for whatever.

How did you find me? Instagram, Google, referral from a friend? Other?

We found you via our dear friend Jo.

Are you interested in learning more about prints and albums?

Sure!

Why have you booked me? What are you most attracted to in my work?

We love your creative eye! The way you frame things and capture movement really communicates the feel and the personalities of the people in front of your lens.

Anything else I should know? Anything you'd like to share about the structure of your relationship? Do you have any injuries? Are you pregnant? Any strong aversions?

I'm not sure if this is relevant, but just so you know: I'm a little scared of heights!

What's something you do together that's meaningful or different?

Every Tuesday night, we go to a swing dancing class. We love to move and be silly together!

Do you consider yourselves introverted or extroverted?

I'm more extroverted, and she's more introverted. But it also depends on the day!

Are you more attracted to fun, laughing, flirty photos or deep, soulful, romantic photos? It's totally fine if your answer is 'both'!

We love both

Do you like black and white photos or prefer mostly color photos?

I think we'd prefer mostly color photos but if you could include one or two black and white ones that'd be great, too!

Do you know each other's love language? What is it for each of you?

I'm acts of service, and she's quality time.

How comfortable are you both with public displays of affection?

Medium comfortable.

What can we do to make this photoshoot feel like a fun date?

Tequila?
